Listen to His Voice

Last Sunday we were asked to “repent, for the Kingdom of God is at hand.” That was a bit scary, but the Gospel ended with Jesus calling the first of His apostles to become “fishers of men.” Today’s readings focus on the “Kingdom of God” and how He will speak to us: through prophets.

In the reading from Deuteronomy, the Israelites have been frightened by God’s power. They have seen the fire, felt the earthquake, and fear death if He speaks to them directly, so they have asked God to speak to them only through Moses. God accepts their request, and agrees to speak not only through Moses, but in the future through prophets He will “raise up” from among them.

In return they are to listen to these prophets, and do the will of God that they speak. The Israelites will know that the prophets come from God because God “will put my words into his mouth; he shall tell them all that I command him.” If they do not listen then, “I myself will make him (them) answer for it.” There will be false prophets also, who will presume to speak in His name, or in the name of other gods. We should not listen to them, and they “shall die”.

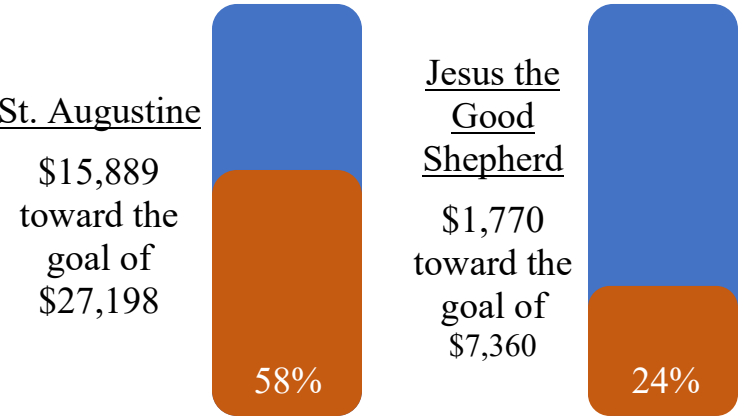

The psalmist tells us how we should behave: Come let us bow down in worship; let us kneel before the Lord who made us. For he is our God, and we are the people he shepherds, the flock he guides. “The flock he guides,” that is the key! For God has been guiding us from the beginning, if we only would listen. That is why the sharp rebuke last Sunday, “repent!” We still are not listening.

St. Paul’s letter to the Corinthians continues his lesson from last Sunday. If we focus on things, and emotions we aren’t focusing on God. If we become monastics we can truly focus on God, but how many of us can live our lives removed from the world? If we marry, or even if we remain single but live in the world, we become caught up in the needs of others, in the difference between the moral and immoral life. We may keep God in our minds and act as we believe He would have us act, but sometimes we forget to trust in God’s plan as we follow our own.

In Mark’s Gospel even the “unclean spirits” recognized Jesus for who He is. For those who remembered God’s promise to “raise up” one who would speak the words God put into his mouth, one who would be the “Word of God,” they would spread the message of His authority. The authority we all should be listening to and following, not in fear of the “Kingdom of God,” but in striving to be worthy of it.
